GMOC started out with a small group of only five volunteers and over the last four years has grown to a membership of 25 to 30 people. These men work hard to help promote positive gay models, encourage positive self-esteem and safer sex.

They have truly made an impact on Edmonton's gay community and are now being recognized nationally. This is no small feat to achieve and GMOC would not be the group it is without its hardworking dedicated and sometimes "a little crazy" volunteers.

One such volunteer is Allen M. I would like to share with you a conversation I had with him as an introduction to a new feature of the GMOC update, the GMOC Profile.

GMOC: How long have you been a member of GMOC?

Allen: Hard question, I think since the spring of 1992.

GMOC: You started out with the AIDS Network Edmonton as a buddy in the buddy program, right?

Allen: Yes, that's right.

GMOC: Why did you decide to join GMOC?

Allen: To immerse myself in the reality of AIDS and being gay.

GMOC: Over the last two years, what have you done with GMOC? What have you accomplished.

Allen: I've done a lot of the Blitzes and Displays we do around the city, which hopefully has resulted in educating people.

GMOC: You were also involved with GMOC's new poster, logo and Man-To-Man Series promotion released last summer, weren't you?

Allen: Yes, I was. It was a very interesting and educational process.

GMOC: What are you involved with now with GMOC?

Allen: I am the liaison for GMOC with the Pride Week Committee and I'm still involved with the outreach.

GMOC: What is your vision for GMOC? What direction would you like to see us go?

Allen: I definitely would like us to do some more fundraising and to become a bigger and more stable presence in the community and to continue our work on self-esteem and self-confidence issues.

GMOC: Personally, what do you want to get out of GMOC?

Allen: I would like to go to bed at night knowing that people are having safer sex!

GMOC: What are some other things you are currently involved in?

Allen: I'm currently involved with the production of the Pride Week Passport and my partner and I are going to the Pride March in New York on June 26th. Oh...and I also make fridge magnets.

GMOC: Fridge magnets?

Allen: Yes, it's something I do to relax and I really enjoy it.

GMOC: It's been great talking with you Allen. Thanks for all your help over the last couple of years.

Allen: Thanks, wanna a fridge magnet?

GMOC: Yeah, sure! I'll stick it on my fridge.

Catch next month's VIP Newsletter for another exciting and indepth interview of a GMOC volunteer.

St. Patrick's Day, Easter and Pride Week are coming up, so you can expect GMOC to be out there celebrating these events and promoting positive, encouraging messages.

For now, take care and be happy! I am, because I have a great fridge magnet that just finishes off my kitchen.

AIDS In The Workplace Demonstration Project

The AIDS In The Workplace, phase one, funded by the Edmonton Community Foundation, Levi Strauss and Co. (Canada) Inc. and the Edmonton Realtors' Charitable Foundation is up and running. The project will assist businesses in tailoring policy and educational programs to their specific needs.

Bill MacDonald, project Manager and Catherine Reininger, Administrative Assistant have met with local and national health and AIDS organizations. Bill has identified local business leaders who will serve as the project's advisors.

Meetings between project staff, the advisors and the Training Consultation Team (professionals experienced in HIV/AIDS issues) are in the works as the project advances into the second of its four phases.

If you would like to become involved as a volunteer in this exciting project, give Bill MacDonald a call at the Network.

A more personal and understanding approach to AIDS

As the AIDS epidemic enters its second decade it is clear that for the foreseeable future the numbers of infected individuals will continue to increase. In Canada the disease has historically been associated with homosexual and bisexual men and intravenous drug users.

One of the trends that has emerged in the nineties is the growing incidence of infection through heterosexual contact. HIV infection through heterosexual contact is becoming the fastest growing route of transmission. The incidence of infection among women with young children is now becoming a larger issue.

The implications of more mothers being infected are being felt by support services. When someone is raising a family, gaining access to medical and emotional support is difficult when coupled with the daily strain of running a household.

Our clients have asked us to concentrate on developing more practical supports

If one adds to this, the numerous opportunistic illness and treatment demands of living with AIDS, the amount of support needed is significant.

Our clients have asked us to concentrate on developing more practical supports. We are currently in the process of expanding our volunteer base and expertise in order to meet this need.

The influence of the Caring Together project is also being felt in how we train and support our volunteers. In our regular workshops and meetings, we are constantly challenging one another to examine the primacy of the client and what that means in practice.

This has meant remaining vigilant against making assumptions for our clients, imposing our own values and agendas on clients, and how any of our actions on behalf of clients must be undertaken with their approval.

Although there has been an awareness in the past of these issues, in recent months we have found that often our undermining of client primacy can take subtle forms.

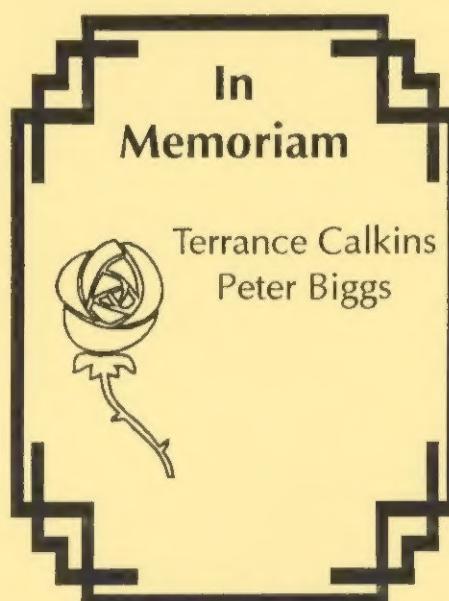

For example, our volunteers have indicated that they routinely shared their own experiences as a volunteer with their spouse. Although this type of sharing of experiences is seemingly harmless, it does involve revealing intimate details of a client's life.

Therefore, volunteers are instructed that if they are planning on discussing a client's situation with a family member they will need to ask their clients permission to do so.

Although it feels quite natural to talk to those close to us about our experiences, we must always keep in mind that ultimately the decision to do so rests with the client.

Dave Sokolan

The staff of Support Services would like to thank the many volunteers who have helped make it easier for those who have died of AIDS and to those who have also helped ease some of the grief for their families.

Organizers of the recent Black and White Affair, a fund raiser for the AIDS Network of Edmonton Society, are overwhelmed with the response to this year's event.

"Close to 500 people bought tickets this year," says Chairperson Donald Michalkow. "That's more than twice as many as last year, and has helped the Black and White become a money-maker for the first time in the Network's history."

"A great deal of that success has to do with the addition of a Silent Auction this year," he says. Under the leadership of AIDS Network board member Sharon Marcus, the auction alone raised over $10,000.

Overall proceeds from the Black and White are expected to exceed $15,000.

Commerce Place, for the second year in a row, played an integral role in this event. "We have been extremely fortunate to have Commerce Place as our major event sponsor," says Donald. "Vickie Zern and Kevin Smith have truly gone above and beyond in accommodating the AIDS Network ever since they joined the Black and White Steering Committee. We simply could not have succeeded without their cooperation, professionalism and expert guidance." The classic elegance of Commerce Place, he says, is a perfect setting for this event. (See the complete list of Steering Committee members in this newsletter.)

The Westin Hotel was the other major player in the 1994 Black and White Affair. Supplying not only food and beverage services, the Westin allowed the Network to borrow tables, chairs, tablecloths, bars, candles, table-skirts, glassware, silverware ... you name it, the Westin provided it. And they even recruited coffee and pop donors - thank you Dickson's Coffee and Gray Beverage.

The Westin's Carvery Manager Brian Welsh kindly agreed to become a member of the Black and White Steering Committee. We're not sure if he completely realized what he was getting Speaking of indispensable, there wouldn't be a Black and White without Edmonton's arts and entertainment community. (A complete list of artists and entertainers is featured in this edition of V.I.P.) The AIDS Network proudly salutes the musicians and performers - who all donated their time - for making such a valuable contribution to this event. Joined this year by a number of visual artists in the Silent Auction, the 'Artists For Life' motif becomes even more significant for the AIDS Network.

And last - but far from least - the AIDS Network recognizes its volunteers: An enormous thank-you to all of the people who helped in any way with the Black and White. Committee members, the 'muscled' men (and women, right Debbie?!) who moved furniture, the people who worked at the event, those who set up, cleaned up and generally put up with sometimes less than glamorous tasks... well, words cannot say how grateful we all are.
